Research Brief

Assessing the Impact of Implementing the Tennessee Incident Based Reporting System (TIBRS) on Offense Reporting within the Tennessee Department of Correction (TDOC).

June 20, 2000

Compiled by TDOC's Planning and Research Section

James A. Wilson Director The Tennessee Offender Management Information System (TOMIS) database currently contains almost 1100 different offense category codes associated with felony offenses as defined by Tennessee statute. These codes describe offenses that fall under the 1989 revision of the Tennessee Code by the General Assembly as well as the offense codes that existed before the revision. Because TDOC still holds inmates incarcerated under the law as it existed before 1989, it is necessary that TOMIS continue to include offenses before and after the revision of Tennessee Code. Because of the sheer number of felony offenses, attempting to categorize offenses in a logical manner has proven to be a difficult task for a number of reasons.

When presenting data in various reports, the categorization of offenses has been a subjective process prone to the individual judgement of TDOC's Director of Planning and Research. There has been no specific rationale for the categorization of offenses in a particular manner other than a logic based on the director's understanding of a particular offense. Although this may not seem particularly problematic, it ultimately results in some confusion. Most persons will agree, for example, that 1st Degree Murder falls within the bounds of the general category of "Homicide". It is not so clear however, that a "Facilitation", or "Conspiracy" offense (i.e., Conspiracy—First degree murder—TOMIS offense number 3260) should be included as a homicide offense. In this case, in that the actual substantive offense has not been committed, the question of whether "Conspiracy—First degree murder" should be counted under homicides is subject to differing interpretations and may be handled differently by different persons at different points in time. Thus, because of the subjectivity of the categorization process, there have been differences in how offenses are more generally coded over time.

It was primarily for the above reasons that TDOC's Planning and Research unit explored various options for both a logical and consistent manner of categorizing offenses. TCA 38-10-101 indicates that the director of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation shall establish a system of intrastate communication of vital statistics and information relating to crime, criminals, and criminal activity (see Attachment 1). In a collaborative effort with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, working under a grant from the U.S. Department of Justice, the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation instituted the National Incident Based Reporting System (NIBRS) in Tennessee. The Tennessee Incident Based Reporting System (TIBRS) addresses all the elements of a crime incident including administrative, offense, victim, offender, property loss, arrestee, and law enforcement officers killed or assaulted (LEOKA). Tennessee was the twelfth state to have been certified by the FBI to be in compliance with the NIBRS. Because Tennessee statute 38-10-101 authorizes the TBI to establish a system of reporting crime and criminal offenses, and the TIBRS is a pragmatic solution to most of the issues discussed above, TDOC's Planning and Research unit instituted the TIBRS as a method of offense reporting and categorization effective July 1, 2000.

Reporting offenses based on the TIBRS accomplishes several important tasks at one time. First, it provides a logical, consistent categorization and presentation of information that is not dependent on the subjective judgements of individuals over time. Further, when questions arise regarding the classification of offenses, it provides a documented standard rationale for why offenses are categorized the way they are. In addition, it provides a basis of comparison across reporting units. Not only is it important that similar offenses are reported in the same manner across jurisdictions within the same state, but it is also important for comparison purposes that offenses are reported similarly across states. It is for this reason that most federal funding agencies are "strongly suggesting" that the NIBRS offense categorization be used whenever feasible for reporting offenses when requested. If states use substantively different systems of offense categorization when reporting, then there is no basis for comparison. For example, when federal agencies award VOI/TIS (Violent Offender Incarceration/Truth-in-Sentencing) grants, there are difficulties in determining whether different states are reporting comparable crimes as Part I Violent Offenses.

Further, use of a single system across criminal justice agencies promotes consistency within the state for the reporting of criminal offenses not only across jurisdictions but also across those different agencies. There are multiple advantages to having all criminal justice agencies within the State Of Tennessee using the same system of criminal offense reporting. Most importantly, it is critical that legislators, criminal justice agencies, and other public officials have a common language and understanding for the purpose of making public policy decisions. Finally, for the purposes of the TDOC's Planning and Research unit, having a concise, accurate system of classifying offenses will greatly reduce the amount of time devoted to data extraction and data cleaning.

There are some limitations to using the TIBRS however, and those are briefly discussed here. First, for our purposes, the TIBRS offense categorization can only be tied to a particular TCA code affiliated with an offense. However, the specifics of a criminal offense will often be the defining factor in how an offense is reported, not the TCA code. This is exemplified in the following excerpt from the TBI's TIBRS Data Collection Manual (pg. 3):

Especially Aggravated Burglary, under TCA 39-14-404, when the offender is breaking in to steal tangible valuables and someone was severely injured, would be reported as Burglary/Breaking and Entering and Robbery. If the intent of the offender is to break in and harm the individuals living there, then Burglary/Breaking and Entering and Aggravated Assault would be reported.

Because the Tennessee Offender Management Information System offenses are based on TCA code however, we are unable to make the fine distinctions noted above, i.e., we have no way of knowing whether the Especially Aggravated Burglary involved robbery or assault or some other defining characteristic. Based on the TIBRS, the TCA codes for Aggravated Kidnapping and Especially Aggravated Kidnapping could be classified as either Kidnapping or Assault. In the few instances in which this occurs, to be consistent over time, we have opted to report those offenses designated as "Especially Aggravated" as the more serious (i.e., involving violence). In this case, both Especially Aggravated Kidnapping and Especially Aggravated Burglary will typically be classified under Aggravated Assault (see Table 2 for detail). The primary reason for this is that these offenses, which have assaultive elements under Tennessee statute, when included under Aggravated Assault constitute violent crimes. These are not considered violent crimes when included under the substantive offenses of Burglary and Kidnapping. And although it is possible to classify it differently under different circumstances, the main concern has been consistency in reporting, not only with other criminal justice agencies, but also over time. For this reason, we opt to report these offenses as the most violent offense at all times.²

A second issue with the TIBRS is that the collaborative effort between the TBI and the FBI focused on current TCA statutes. As noted earlier, the Tennessee General Assembly revised the

² For the most part, these offenses are Especially Aggravated Burglary and Especially Aggravated Kidnapping. There are 6 offenses in total and the TOMIS offense codes are shown in column 2 of Table 2 under Aggravated Assault. The primary assumption underlying the decision to report is that since all of these offenses involve elements of violence to be charged as a criminal offense of this type, it is likely that there was a violent/assaultive element that led to the original criminal charge of "Especially Aggravated".

Tennessee legal code in 1989. Because TDOC still has felons incarcerated prior to that revision, and because persons could still conceivably be incarcerated under those repealed statutes, TDOC must continue to maintain those offenses on the TOMIS database. In this instance, categorization of those offenses was strictly at the discretion of the Director of Planning and Research. Every attempt was made to make sure that the statutes under the repealed code were categorized based on TIBRS criteria.

The National Incident Based Reporting System

Tables 1 and 1a show how the FBI categorizes and codes felony offenses in accordance with the NIBRS system. Each particular offense type is shown as a crime against person, property, or society and is given a specific code. Arson, for example, is shown as a crime against property and coded 200. Drug offenses are typically shown as crimes against society and coded under the NIBRS as 35A or 35B. When categorizing offenses in the NIBRS framework, crimes which are the substantive offense are included under the primary offense category. Thus, "Aggravated Robbery" is classified as a robbery, but "Facilitation—Robbery" or "Aiding and Abetting Robbery" would not be included under the primary offense of Robbery. In addition, criminal offenses that are "Attempted" (e.g., Attempted Burglary), are also included with the substantive offense. The one major exception to this is that "Attempted Murder" is typically classified as an Aggravated Assault. Thus, 1st Degree Murder is categorized as a Group A Homicide Offense. Again, in contrast, the criminal offenses of "Conspiracy to Commit Murder" or "Aiding and Abetting murder" are not categorized as homicide offenses, but rather are included in a generic "Other" category (90Z in the table). The logic behind this is that since a homicide was not actually committed, these particular offenses should not be categorized as the substantive offense. This applies to all offense types across the spectrum.³

Implementing the TIBRS and Offense Reporting by TDOC

Table 2 details how TDOC currently plans to report offenses based on the TIBRS. Table 1 delineated the categorizations based on the NIBRS, and Table 2 shows how that offense classification system is adapted to fit with the TOMIS offenses and the constraints already noted. There are several reasons for the way offenses are categorized in this table. The primary system is of course, the TIBRS. Also, as noted, there are several burglary and kidnapping offenses that are labeled as "Especially Aggravated". Because of the nature of these offenses, especially in that they entail assaultive elements, they are included under Aggravated Assaults and are coded as 13AX and 13AZ. The purpose for this is to enable the statistical staff to separate these particular offenses independently and recategorize them as the substantive offense if necessary. However, in all situations, unless otherwise noted, these offenses will henceforth be included under the designation of Aggravated Assaults. A similar approach has been taken with robbery and drug offenses as well (although these will continue to be classified with the substantive offenses). Aggravated Robbery has been designated so that it is easily separable from simple robbery, and for drug offenses, the offense codes designating cocaine offenses have been given a slightly different designation (35AZ rather than simply 35A) in order to be able to examine them independently of other drug offenses.

Property offenses are sometimes combined in the reporting as shown in Table 2 rather than showing individual components, especially when the number of total offenders shown is substantially smaller than for most other offense categories. For example, TOMIS indicates that there are currently no felons incarcerated in Tennessee for offenses involving Motor Vehicle Theft (MVT). Thus, MVT has been combined with other property offenses which also show a very small number of incarcerated offenders, i.e., bad checks, bribery, embezzlement, extortion, and vandalism/destruction. Because each offense type has been classified according to TIBRS criteria, it is still always possible to differentiate them when necessary.

In terms of the actual reporting differences that result from these changes, these are detailed in Tables 3 and 4. There are several substantive reporting changes that occur with the institution of the TIBRS. Table 3 details one of the various offense classification systems historically used by TDOC's Planning and Research unit, and Table 4 shows how the offense reporting will look when categorized based on the TIBRS. Although most of the differences are relatively minor, there are several substantive changes as a result of changing classification systems.

The first notable change, as shown in Table 3, is that under the prior system, there are over 4,300 offenders with homicide offenses, constituting 19.1% of the total TDOC population (including offenders in TDOC backup and local jails). In contrast, under the new reporting system, there are only 3,496 offenders listed under homicide offenses. There are several reasons for this net decrease of almost 20%. The primary reason is that "Attempted Murder" is no longer categorized as a homicide offense, but under the TIBRS is included as an Aggravated Assault. As a result of this, not only does the number of offenses under homicide decrease sharply, but there is a corresponding sharp increase in the number of offenses classified as Aggravated Assault. Whereas Aggravated Assault constituted 7.2% of all offenses under the prior system, it is now 10.4% of the entire total, increasing from 1,640 to 2,363, a 50% increase.

The second reason that the number of homicide offenders has dropped is that under the prior system, if someone was convicted of "Conspiracy to Commit Murder", "Facilitation of Murder", "Aiding and Abetting Murder", etc., these offenses were included with homicide offenses. However, in that these individuals were not convicted for the substantive offense, under the TIBRS, these persons are included under a more generic "other" category. This can be seen at the bottom of Table 4 under "All Other Offenses". These have been grouped in broad categories to give an indication of how many persons are currently incarcerated under the types of offenses noted above. C/S/F Person offenses, for example, will include all person offense crimes such as murder, assault, kidnapping, and rape, but will be limited to criminal offenses defined as "Conspiracy", "Soliciting", "Facilitation", etc. As is indicated, "All Other Offenses" total only 5.5% of the entire TDOC felon population, and the bulk of this falls into the "All Other" category listed at the bottom of the column. The bulk of the "All Other" category of offenses in this case are constituted by habitual traffic offenders and the criminal offenses of "Failure to appear".

Also, although constituting a very small number of all homicide offenses, all categorizations of Vehicular Homicide are now included under Key Societal Offenses. A total of 191 felons (.8% of the total population) have been convicted of vehicular homicide, but under the TIBRS, these are reported under all other offenses. These are broken out separately here for reporting purposes because of the seriousness of the offense. Vehicular homicides are categorized under the NIBRS/TIBRS as a Group B Traffic offense of Driving Under the Influence.

In addition, to reiterate a change noted previously, Kidnapping is also substantively reduced under the TIBRS classification. The primary reason for this is that the offense of Especially Aggravated Kidnapping has been included under Aggravated Assault. Although Burglary is approximately 11.8% of all offenses under both classification schemes, Especially Aggravated Burglary is reported under Aggravated Assault in the TIBRS because of the assaultive elements inherent in the offense.

Instituting this change provides TDOC an accurate, consistent and easily documented method of reporting criminal offenses. It also brings TDOC in line with the NIBRS/TIBRS categorization of offenses which is now not only the national, but also the state standard for criminal offense reporting. Finally, it provides TDOC's Planning and Research unit with a method for categorizing offenses that is significantly less time-consuming and labor intensive. Although there are some limitations in the degree with which the TOMIS offenses can be grouped based on the TIBRS, these are for the most part negligible. As a final note, Appendix A is a current listing of TOMIS criminal offense codes, the affiliated TCA code, the descriptive offense, and the corresponding TIBRS code as outlined in Table 2. This appendix provides a comprehensive breakdown of criminal offenses currently on TOMIS and how these offenses are accounted for in the TIBRS reporting system.
